Read the passage and answer the questions 28 to 30.

Egypt owes its very life to the great river Nile which flows through it from south to north. When the snow on the mountains in the far away south melts, the river begins to carry more and more water. This happens every year. The river swells and at last overflows its banks. This flood water is very precious to the Egyptians for the needs of the farmers. The flood water is carried in little canals to the field on either side of the river. It is quite true that if there were no Nile, there would be no green fertile Egypt. The desert would cover the entire land. Here we find fields of sugarcane, rice, wheat and barley. We also see great stretches of land growing Egypt's biggest crop of all—cotton.

28. Egypt's biggest crop is _____.
- (A) wheat (B) barley
(C) cotton (D) rice
29. Find out the sentence which is true.
- (A) Egypt is full of greenery.
(B) Egypt depends on the river Nile.

- (C) Egypt can survive easily without Nile.
 - (D) Nile flows east to west.
30. The basic theme of the passage is _____.
- (A) Egypt and its people
 - (B) Egypt and its agriculture
 - (C) The importance of river Nile for Egypt
 - (D) Egypt and its desert
